

Conference Speaking

The impact cultural difference have on global business and the issues surrounding making international virtual teams work effectively are topics which can add enormous energy to any business conference.

Keith Warburton, the founder of Global Business Culture, is a conference speaker of international renown who is in great demand on the conference circuit. Working with our clients, we aim to add value to any conference by fully engaging the audience and making the topics relevant, alive and vibrant and directly related to delegates' day-to-day business dilemmas.

Keith Warburton has years of experience in addressing corporate audiences and brings a combination of global knowledge, corporate insight and humour to his conference addresses. Whether he is delivering a key-note speech or facilitating group workshops with feedback sessions, Keith will leave the conference delegates with a number of thought provoking ideas.

Conference speech topics include:

- The impact of international cultural differences on global business
- Developing a global mindset
- Making international virtual teams work
- Improving efficiencies in international off-shore projects
- Selling to a global market
- The cultural aspects of HR
- Global talent management and development

